By Alan Sembera 1 Comstock/Comstock/Getty Images If your television set is not digital-ready, you probably will need to install a DTV converter box if you want to receive a digital cable signal. Even though many cable companies continue to offer many channels via an analog signal, many channels that are offered in a basic cable package will require the DTV converter in order to be viewed on an analog television set. These converter boxes are available from your cable company. Connect the cable from the wall to the "Cable In" connection on the back of the DTV converter box. Attach a short length of cable to the connection on the back of the converter box labeled "Cable Out" or "To TV." This cable should have come with your converter box. Attach the other end of the short cable to the connector on the back of the television set labeled "Cable In" or "RF In." Set the switch on the back of the converter box to "Channel 3." Plug in the converter box and turn it on. Turn on your television and change it to channel 3. Contact your cable company and have them activate your converter box. You will need your account information and the serial number of the converter box. Most cable companies allow you to activate your converter through their website or by using an automated telephone system. Wait several minutes (or longer) for the service to activate. Use the remote control that came with the converter box to change channels once the service activates. Leave the television on channel 3. STEP 3. TV specificationsTo find out if your television model has an integrated DTV receiver, visit the Television section on the Samsung UK website. You can easily get there by following the guidelines below.Click on TV Audio Video on the global navigation bar on the Samsung UK website, and clickTelevision.Choose your product type and click on Tech Specs.NOTE: If you can not get specific channels, please upgrade your TV to the latest firmware by USB, and then please contact a DTV signal supplier if the issue persists. The two most common missing channel problems are: • You only get channels 2 through 13 • You are missing random channels 1. If you are only getting channels 2 through 13 If you are getting only channels 2 through 13, most likely you have the RF cable attached to the wrong input on your TV. To receive all of your channels, follow these steps: 1) Remove the RF cable from its current RF input and attach it to the other RF in on the TV. 2) Follow the steps for "If you are missing random channels" directly below. 2. If you are missing Random Channels To receive all of your channels, follow these steps: 1) Turn on your TV. 2) Press [Menu] on your TV remote to bring up the Main menu. 3) Press [Arrow Down] to the Channel Menu, and then press [Enter]. 4) Press [Arrow Down] to Auto Program, and then press [Enter]. 5) Press [Arrow Up or Down] to select Air, Cable, or Air+Cable, and then press [Enter]. If you selected Air, the TV automatically starts the auto program. Skip to Step 8. If you selected CABLE or Air+Cable, continue to step 6. 6) You must now select the cable signal type your cable company uses to transmit both digital and analog channels. To select the cable signal type: • Use the Up or Down buttons on your remote in the Analog area to select the appropriate type, and then press [Enter]. The cursor jumps to the Digital area. • Use the Up or Down buttons on your remote in the Digital area to select the appropriate type, and then press [Enter]. • Note: The most common cable signal type is STD, however some smaller cable companies still use the older HRC or IRC systems. Your company uses the same cable signal type to transmit both analog and digital signals. 7) "Start" is now highlighted. Press [Enter] to begin the memorization process. Your TV cycles through all of the channels for the antennas you selected in Step 5. 8) After the Auto Program is complete, press [Exit] to begin watching TV. • Note: If you connected both and antenna and a cable line, you can switch between both inputs by pressing [Antenna]. If the procedures above do not resolve your problem, try the following. • Connect the RF connection to another TV and see if it works. If you do not get all of your channels, the problem lies with the antenna or cable. • Connect the TV to a different cable connection, and then repeat the Auto Program procedure. If you get all of your channels, the problem lies with the cable. • Move or rotate the antenna to improve reception, and then run repeat the Auto Program procedure. If the solution above does not fix your problem, then the tuner in your TV has failed, and you need to get your TV serviced. Contact Us Over the air (OTA) programming has come a long way - instead of static, most local stations now broadcast in HD! And to make things even better, your TV has a tuner that can scan for and automatically program local channels that will appear on your channel list. Plus, an antenna will help your TV find even more channels and improve the quality of the signal. Important: The Broadcasting menu will be greyed out if you do not first change the source to TV. Channels and broadcasts just don't magically appear on your TV. You have to connect an antenna or cable and then scan for local stations. Once you do this, available channels nearby will be yours to watch! First, make sure you have an antenna or a cable box already installed and set up to go. You may need to attach a coax cable to the antenna or box if it doesn't come with one. When you're ready, connect the other end of the coax cable to the ANT IN port on the back of your TV, or One Connect Box if you have one. Change the source on your TV to TV. There are a few ways to do this. You can press the Source button on your remote and then select the source labeled TV. You can press Home, navigate to Source, and then select TV. Once you are on the TV source, use the directional pad or arrow buttons on your remote to select Settings. Select Broadcasting, and then select Auto Program. Select Start to begin auto-programming, and then select either Air, Cable, or Both. Select Air if you are using an antenna only. Select Cable if you are using a cable box only. Select Both if you are using an antenna and a cable box. You will get the most channels this way. Your TV will begin to scan for channels. After it's done, select Close to finish. If you aren't getting a good signal or see an error message on your TV, check out our troubleshooting guide. If you're already bored of all the channels that come with cable or an antenna - or maybe you don't have either set up - you can get free TV using Samsung TV Plus! This service is complimentary on all newer Samsung smart TVs and streams channels over the internet directly to your TV. To access this feature, you simply need to press the Home button on your remote and then select Samsung TV Plus. You can learn more about the service by checking out our complete Samsung TV Plus guide.
